++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very wet and very windy.

Today:
An overcast day with periods of rain, often heavy, particularly across Argyll, bringing the risk of localised flooding. Southerly winds reaching gale force, perhaps severe gale. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Tonight:
Further periods of rain, again heavy at times. Fresh south to southwest winds strong around the coasts and over high ground. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Wednesday:
Starting cloudy with occasional patchy rain. Mainly dry and bright conditions gradually and erratically spreading from the west through the day. Maximum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Generally settled with high pressure extending from south, bringing a lot of dry, occasionally bright weather, westerly winds and seasonally mild temperatures. However Argyll rather cloudy with some patchy rain.
